

Lorna Ho Randlett Bio

Lorna Ho Randlett is Founder and Co-Chair of the Leaders Forum, a C-suite Asian American Pacific Islander executive think tank engaged in public policy. She also is currently a Commissioner for the White House Initiative for Asian American Pacific Islanders. Most recently, she was the Strategic Communications Specialist and External Relations Manager for the global management-consulting firm, McKinsey & Company. Her areas of concentration include global media, thought leadership/stake-holder cultivation and pro-bono and client engagements for nonprofit organizations. She is an experienced leader and advisor in presentation and media/strategic communications specializing in client relationships and management in high profile client events.

Previously, Ms. Randlett was the Communications Director of the San Francisco Unified School District from 2002 to 2006. She established LMH Consulting in 2001 and worked as a broadcast journalist in the San Francisco media markets. She is active in the community, including serving on the San Francisco Library Commission and advising the civic innovation startup, Fusecorp. Ms. Randlett received a B.A. from the University of California, Santa Cruz.